

NFIB is the Voice of Small Business in Albany

Small businesses are being sued for millions of dollars simply because they paid their employees every two weeks instead of every week as is required by an outdated and ambiguous 1890 law.

Many small businesses are being forced to settle these exorbitant lawsuits or close down. Small businesses should be allowed to pay their workers every two weeks just like government agencies and private employers in every other state. If Albany is serious about supporting Main Street and creating economic opportunity for all, it must change this law NOW!
